SAFEGUARDS

Thrown Around Dimock Orchard Seed Potatoes

That Mean Crop Insurance to the Buyer

VERMONT CERTIFICATION safeguards the crop in the field. It looks up the pedigree of the seed planted, inspects the growing crop, reports the percentage of foliage disease and the cultural conditions of the field.

THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT through its warehouse representative, inspects and watches over the crop stored in the licensed warehouse. (Dimock Orchard Warehouse has U. S. Warehouse License No. 1). To qualify for this licensing by Uncle Sam the building must come up to the rigid standards set by the Government. Besides its local representative, an official from Washington makes periodical inspection of the warehouse and contents. He thoroughly investigates the condition of all potatoes stored in the warehouse.

ALL GRADING OF DIMOCK ORCHARD SEED is done under the supervision of a Federally licensed inspector (M. B. Smith, U. S. License No. 1 under the Warehouse Act).

Besides this official supervision, the Dimock Orchard maintains its own force of inspectors and the fields are patrolled, rogued, sprayed and cultivated throughout the season by specialists.

Human knowledge concerning potatoes is still in the formative period and does not permit the accurate prediction of the crop under unknown conditions, but the Dimock Orchard has the best organized protective methods of any seed growers in the country. Our customers have discovered that to buy Dimock Orchard Seed is to buy crop insurance.

It is common knowledge that the crop of seed potatoes is very short and orders should be placed as early as possible.
